vs.
Leocadio C. MAFNAS

Appellate No. 86-9030
District Court NMI
Appellate Division

Decided February 23, 1988

1. Appeal and Error - Standard of Review - Summary Judgment

The Appellate Division reviews the grant or denial of a motion for summary judgment de novo.

2. Appeal and Error - Standard of Review - Summary Judgment

A counsel's own failure to conduct discovery cannot be a basis for reversal of grant of summary judgment. Com.Tr.C.R.Civ.P. 56(c).

3. Civil Procedure - Summary Judgment - Burden of Proof

Once a party seeking summary judgment meets the initial responsibility of informing the court of the basis of the motion, and identifying those portions of the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions of file, together with the affidavits, if any, which the moving party believes demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material fact, the burden then shifts to the party opposing the motion to establish the existence of an element essential to that party's case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at trial. The moving party will be entitled to judgment as a matter of law if the nonmoving party fails to make a sufficient showing on an essential element of their case. Com.R.Civ.P. 56(c).

4. Civil Procedure - Summary Judgment - Discovery

Where nonmoving party simply did not take advantage of the time within which discovery could and should have been conducted, motion for summary judgment was not prematurely granted. Com.R.Civ.P. 56(f).

5. Civil Procedure - Summary Judgment - Particular Actions

Where the defendant presented no facts on a motion for summary judgment which raised a genuine issue of material fact whether an agent/principal relationship continued beyond the time when a lease is granted by an NMI person who took fee title to non NMI persons, and any alleged control of a principle over an agent ceases, the grant of summary judgment was proper on the issue of whether the arrangement violated the land alienation restriction. Com.Tr.C.R.Civ.P. 56(c); NMI Const., Art. XII.

6. Contracts - Void - Undue Influence - Elements

Undue influence is available to void a contract only if the person asserting undue influence shows that the person was under the domination of another or was justified, by virtue of a relation with another, in assuming that the other will not act inconsistently with their welfare.

7. Contracts - Void - Unconscionability

Unconscionability is present in an agreement when it is such that no person in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept on the other.

8. Civil Procedure - Summary Judgment - Burden of Proof

A motion for summary judgment is no place for conjecture and speculation and where the defendant failed to provide evidence of the appraised value of property in support of claim of unconscionability, summary judgment was properly granted. Com.R.Civ.P. 56.

1 Defendant-appellant Leocadio C. Mafnas (hereinafter 2 "defendant" or "Mafnas") appeals from the decision of the 3 Commonwealth Trial Court of the Commonwealth of the Northern 4 Mariana Islands granting summary judgment in favor of 5 plaintiff-appellee, Marian Aldan-Pierce (hereinafter "plaintiff" 6 or "Pierce"). We affirm.

7 BACKGROUND

8 On March 5, 1986, plaintiff filed a complaint for equitable 9 relief in which it is alleged that plaintiff is a resident of the 10 Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (hereinafter "CNMI") 11 and a person of Northern Marianas descent within the meaning of 12 the CNMI Constitution. Mafnas, a resident of the CNMI, warranted 13 to plaintiff that he has free and clear title in fee simple to a 14 certain piece of real property (hereinafter "subject lot") 15 situated in the CNMI. According to the complaint plaintiff's 16 predecessor in interest Antonia Villagomez (hereinafter 17 "Villagomez") entered into a written option agreement with Mafnas 18 to purchase the subject lot. After exercising her option 19 Villagomez assigned her rights to plaintiff. Defendant refuses 20 to honor the option agreement despite Villagomez' and plaintiff's 21 compliance with the terms and conditions of the option agreement.

22 In his answer Mafnas admits that he entered into the option 23 agreement, but asserts that he is not fluent in the English 24 language; he has been advised that the contract is illegal, 25 against public policy and unenforceable; and denies being the 26 owner of the subject lot. Furthermore, Mafnas asserts that

1 plaintiff has no real interest in the option agreement, plaintiff 2 merely being an agent for Randall T. Fennell (hereinafter 3 "Fennell") and Brian McMahon (hereinafter "McMahon"), attorneys 4 not of Northern Marianas descent.

5 According to defendant, Fennell and McMahon engaged 6 Villagomez as an agent for the sole purpose of attempting to 7 acquire for themselves a permanent and long term interest in real 8 property in contravention of the restrictions on alienation of 9 land contained in Article XII of the Commonwealth Constitution.

10 In August 1986, plaintiff filed a motion for summary 11 judgment addressing the following three issues raised by 12 defendant in his answer and counterclaim, title to the subject 13 lot, undue influence and the constitutionality of the 14 transaction. Attached to the moving papers were the affidavits of 15 McMahon, Fennell, Villagomez and plaintiff (hereinafter 16 collectively "August Affidavits").

17 Defendant filed his opposition to the motion for summary 18 judgment on October 8, 1986, the morning of the hearing. With 19 the court's permission plaintiff filed a supplemental memorandum 20 on October 9, 1986. Attached to the supplemental memorandum are 21 three affidavits one each from McMahon, Fennell and plaintiff 22 (hereinafter "Supplemental Affidavits").

23 On October 10, 1986, defendant filed a motion to strike the 24 supplemental affidavits and a motion for continuance in order to 25 provide defendant an opportunity to complete discovery of the 26 evidence possessed by Fennell, McMahon and plaintiff. In support

1 of his motion counsel for defendant filed an affidavit which 2 contains in relevant part the history of his attempts to contact 3 plaintiff for purposes of discovery. According to the undisputed 4 affidavit of Theodore R. Mitchell

5 ... Shortly before the filing of the Plaintiff's 6 Motion for Summary Judgment, I notified counsel 7 to the plaintiff that I intended to take 8 depositions upon oral examination of Messrs.
9 Fennell and McMahon, Ms. Villagomez, and 10 Mrs. Aldan-Pierce and that I would like to arrange 11 a mutually convenient time to do so.

12 ... At the time of the foregoing conversation, 13 counsel to the plaintiff explained that she was 14 presently involved in the Commonwealth Bank case, 15 but after that matter was concluded, we could 16 discuss further the scheduling of the depositions.

17 ... Before those arrangements could be made, for 18 the taking of the deposition, plaintiff filed her 19 Motion for Summary Judgment.

20 Defendant's motion was not acted upon by the trial court.
21 Instead, judgment was rendered on October 15, 1986, in favor of 22 plaintiff. The trial judge found the following facts.

23 Fennell and McMahon provided the funds for the option 24 agreement between Villagomez and Mafnas. It was agreed that 25 Fennell and McMahon would provide the money to exercise the 26 option; Villagomez would accept the money from Fennell and 27 McMahon; pay it to Mafnas; take fee simple title; and lease the 28 property to Fennell and McMahon for the longest period allowed by 29 law.

30 Upon instruction from Fennell and McMahon, Villagomez timely 31 exercised the option to purchase the property for the agreed upon 32 $10 per square meter, but Mafnas refused to convey title or to 33 ///

1 comply with the terms of the option. Thereafter Villagomez 2 assigned her rights in the option to Pierce.

3 Counsel for defendant acknowledged at the hearing on 4 plaintiff's motion for summary judgment that the constitutional 5 issue was properly resolved through a motion for summary 6 judgment. Defendant's position has apparently changed in light 7 of the three supplemental affidavits filed on October 9, 1986. <sup>1/</sup>

8 The trial court found that there is nothing unconstitutional 9 about the transaction and that based on the affidavits and the 10 pleadings on file that summary judgment was mandated on his 11 counterclaim for undue influence. The court further found that 12 Pierce was in fact Fennell and McMahon's agent prior to the 13 execution of the option agreement, but that the agent/principal 14 relationship terminates when the lease is executed. Finally, on 15 the claim of unconscionability the court noted that the defendant 16 presented no evidence to raise a genuine issue of material fact.

17 STANDARD OF REVIEW

18 [1] We review the grant or denial of a motion for summary 19 judgment de novo. Fidelity Financial Corp. v. Federal Home Loan 20 Bank, 792 F.2d 1432, 1437 (9th Cir. 1986); Lone Ranger Television 21 v. Program Radio Corp., 740 F. 2d 718, 720 (9th Cir. 1984).

22 Under Rule 56(c) summary judgment is proper "if the 23 pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and 24 admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show 25 that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that 26 the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law."

1 Celotex v. Catrett, ___ U.S. ___, 106 S.Ct. 2548, 91 L.Ed.2d 265
2 (1986).

3 DISCOVERY

4 One of the issues raised by defendant is whether the trial 5 court erred by failing to either grant his motion to strike the 6 supplemental affidavits, or in the alternative, grant defendant's 7 motion for a continuance of the summary judgment hearing in order 8 to permit defendant to take depositions.

9 Defendant argues that the supplemental affidavits, all 10 phrased in substantially the same terms, are intended to resolve 11 in the plaintiff's favor one of the critical issues presented by 12 the defendant on the unconstitutionality of the option agreement.
13 He argues that the purpose of the affidavits is to establish that 14 as of the present time, there is no agreement between Fennell and 15 McMahon and plaintiff which would permit Fennell and McMahon to 16 exercise control over plaintiff, leaving unanswered the question 17 whether the agent/principal relationship is "open-ended".

18 [2] Under other circumstances this Court might be inclined to 19 agree with defendant that a request for further discovery is 20 warranted. Yet, this Court will not allow a counsel's own 21 failure to conduct discovery to be a basis for reversal.

22 Between counsel for defendant's original request, sometime 23 prior to the filing of the motion for summary judgment on 24 August 28, 1986, and the hearing on the motion on October 8, 25 1986, the record reveals no attempt by counsel to take the 26 depositions of McMahon, Fennell, Villagomez or plaintiff. The 1 supplemental affidavits raise no novel issue which counsel for 2 defendant should not have anticipated by the filing of the August 3 affidavits or the complaint itself. In fact, the August 4 affidavits embrace the sole fact addressed in the supplemental 5 affidavits. <sup>2/</sup>

6 Counsel had over one month to depose the affiants, or if 7 necessary, the same amount of time within which to file a request 8 for continuance on the motion for summary judgment to allow for 9 the taking of depositions. Counsel for defendant did neither.

10 We note that the original hearing date motion was continued at 11 defendant's request from September 10, 1986 to September 19, 12 1986, and was further continued, by stipulation, to October 8, 13 1986.

14 [3] Under Celotex once a party seeking summary judgment meets 15 the initial responsibility of informing the court of the basis of 16 the motion, and identifying those portions of the pleadings, 17 depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions of file, 18 together with the affidavits, if any, which the moving party 19 believes demonstrate the absence of a genuine issue of material 20 fact, the burden then shifts to the party opposing the motion to 21 establish the existence of an element essential to that party's 22 case, and on which that party will bear the burden of proof at 23 trial. The moving party will be entitled to judgment as a matter 24 of law if the nonmoving party fails to make a sufficient showing 25 on an essential element of their case.

26 ///

1 Rule 56(e) requires the nonmoving party to go beyond the 2 pleadings and their own affidavits and designate specific facts 3 showing that there is a genuine issue for trial. Rule 56(e) 4 permits a summary judgment motion to be opposed by any of the 5 kinds of evidence listed in Rule 56(c), except the mere pleadings 6 themselves, and it is from this list that a court expects the 7 nonmoving party to make the showing of a genuine issue of 8 material fact. 3/

9 If this Court felt that the motion for summary judgment was 10 premature, under Rule 56(f) we could either find that the court 11 should properly have denied the motion for summary judgment, or 12 remand for a continuance on the hearing of the motion for summary 13 judgment to provide the nonmoving party with an opportunity to 14 make full discovery.

15 [4] In light of the history of this case we cannot say that the 16 nonmoving party was not provided with an opportunity to make full 17 discovery. Instead, it appears that the nonmoving party simply 18 did not take advantage of the time within which discovery could 19 and should have been conducted.

20 Restraint on Alienation of Land

21 Defendant contends that despite the facade of a 22 lessor/lessee relationship between plaintiff and Fennell and 23 McMahon, the latter two are in reality acquiring a fee simple 24 interest in land in contravention of Article XII, Section 1 of 25 the CNMI Constitution which restrict permanent and long-term 26 interests in real property to persons of Northern Marianas

1 ~~assume~~. 4/ These argument is premised on the theory that 2 Fennell and McMahon are principals and plaintiff is their agent.

3 Affidavits submitted by plaintiff establish an 4 agent/principal relationship, as alleged by defendant, between 5 Fennell and McMahon, and Villagomez and later plaintiff from the 6 inception of the deal until the execution of the lease agreement.

7 The August affidavits state that upon execution of the 8 option agreement plaintiff will retain a fee interest in the 9 subject lot. Thereafter, in exchange for their having provided 10 the money to execute the option agreement Fennell and McMahon 11 will receive a 55 year lease. The only issue necessary for this 12 Court to determine is whether a fact is presented which raises a 13 genuine issue of material fact whether the agent/principal 14 relationship continues during the term of the lease agreement or 15 thereafter.

16 To successfully oppose plaintiff's motion for summary 17 judgment defendant must present some fact to dispute the evidence 18 presented by plaintiff that she retains a fee simple interest in 19 the subject lot.

20 [5] We agree with the court below no fact has been presented to 21 raise a question as to plaintiff's ongoing duty as an agent.
22 Upon the facts presented to the trial court the granting of a 23 lease to Fennell and McMahon transforms the agent/principal 24 relationship to that of a lessor/lessee. The alleged control of 25 the principal over the agent ceases. Although defendant suggests 26

1 that plaintiff remains the agent of Fennell and McMahon no fact 2 is presented to substantiate this claim. 5/

3 The granting of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment is 4 proper only because defendant failed to present a fact upon which 5 the court could find a genuine issue of material fact, after 6 plaintiff met her initial burden. 6/

7 On the facts presented on the constitutional issue we cannot 8 say the court erred in granting plaintiff's motion for summary 9 judgment.

10 UNDUE INFLUENCE

11 In order to support a claim of undue influence the defendant 12 must set forth a genuine issue of material fact of an element 13 upon which defendant will bear the burden at trial. At trial 14 defendant would have to show that he was unfairly persuaded and 15 was under the domination of Fennell, the person allegedly 16 exercising the persuasion, or who by virtue of the relation 17 between Fennell and defendant, defendant was justified in 18 assuming that Fennell would not act in a manner inconsistent with 19 defendant's welfare. Restatement of Contracts, Second, §177.

20 [6] The Comment to §177 states that undue influence is available 21 to void a contract only if the required relation is found. That 22 is, undue influence "protects a person only if he is under the 23 domination of another or is justified, by virtue of his relation 24 with another in assuming that the other will not act 25 inconsistently with his welfare."

26 ///

1 In his first counterclaim, defendant alleges:

2 ...Attorney Fennell is a highly educated person. He 3 possesses extraordinary powers of persuasion (sic) and influence.

4 ...The defendant is a man of limited education. He cannot speak or read the English language. He is 5 a man of modest financial means.

6 ...Because Attorney Fennell is an attorney, defendant Mafnas was justified in assuming that Attorney Fennell would not act in a manner inconsistent with defendant Mafnas' welfare...

7 ...Defendant Mafnas was further justified in 8 assuming that Attorney Fennell would not act in a manner inconsistent with his welfare, because 9 Attorney Fennell had previously represented three sisters of defendant Mafnas in connection with a 10 matter involving family land.

11 Relevant portions of the August affidavits set forth 12 Fennell's role in negotiating the option agreements. The option 13 agreement was executed over a period of many years. At all times 14 defendant utilized a translator of his choice. Fennell 15 represented defendant's three sisters in an action to recover 16 family land, but attests he was specifically instructed not to 17 represent defendant.

18 Under Celotex we turn to the evidence presented by 19 defendant, by affidavit or otherwise, to show that a genuine 20 issue of material fact exists. The defendant's affidavit filed 21 in opposition to the motion for summary judgment does not rebut 22 the relevant portions of Fennell's affidavit regarding undue 23 influence. We will not rely on the pleadings themselves to find 24 a genuine issue of material fact. Celotex, supra. There is no 25 showing that the required relation between Fennell and defendant 26 existed to support a claim for undue influence.

1 We affirm the court's granting of summary judgment on 2 defendant's counterclaim for undue influence.

3 UNCONSCIONABILITY

4 [7] Finally, on the issue of unconscionability, the court citing 5 restatement of Contracts Second, §208, Comment B, noted that 6 defendant presents no fact to establish that the option agreement 7 is unconscionable in that it is "such as no man in his senses and 8 not under delusion will make on the one hand, and as no honest 9 and fair man would accept on the other."

10 According to the terms of the option agreement the purchase 11 price is $10 per square meter. In his affidavit defendant states 12 that he is informed and believes that an anticipated appraisal 13 report will indicate the value of the property to be "greatly in 14 excess" of $10 per square meter.

15 [8] A motion for summary judgment is no place for conjecture and 16 speculation. Once again plaintiff has met her initial burden.
17 Defendant presents no fact to show that there is a genuine issue 18 of material fact. We affirm the court's order granting summary 19 judgment on the issue of unconscionability.

3           1/ Looking closely at the supplemental affidavits this 4 Court notes that they do nothing more than reiterate the 5 substance of the August affidavits. See Footnote 2, infra.

6           2/ The supplemental affidavits all state that "No 7 agreement exists concerning the property which is the subject 8 of this case which compels (plaintiff) to hold or dispose of title 9 at the direction of (Fennell or McMahon). While (plaintiff) will 10 give (Fennell and McMahon) a lease, she is free to disposed of 11 title at her pleasure."

12           The August affidavits all state in relevant part that 13 Fennell and McMahon would provide the money for the purchase of 14 the subject lot in return for a lease for the maximum length 15 allowed by law.

16           3/ In his dissent Judge Miyamoto lists factual issues 17 which he believes may be present or implied. It is the opinion 18 of the majority that the issues raised by Judge Miyamoto are 19 either irrelevant or if relevant, were not raised by the 20 appellant below. A court may not look to the pleadings themselves 21 to find genuine issues of material fact.

22           4/ Article XII Section 3, as amended, provides that person 23 not of Northern Marianas descent may acquire leasehold interests 24 for 55 years including any term of renewal.

1           5/ Defendant's continuing agency theory is based on 2 sections 149 and 385 of the Restatement of Agency. These sections 3 are inapposite to the relationship created under the lease 4 because the evidence presented does not support defendant's 5 claim that plaintiff agreed to hold title to the subject lot for 6 the benefit and subject to the control of Fennell and McMahon.

7           6/ For this reason the holding in this case does not reach 8 the merits of the constitutional challenge to the transaction 9 presented here.

MIYAMOTO, District Judge<sup>1</sup>

The undersigned disagrees with the decision of the other two judges of this appellate panel to affirm the trial court's granting of plaintiff's motion for summary judgment.

At the outset, it should be noted that this is a case of paramount importance to persons of Northern Marianas descent since the case involves the constitutionality of the practice in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, hereinafter referred to as the "Commonwealth," wherein persons of non-Northern Marianas descent acquired what may be considered permanent long-term interests in real estate in the Commonwealth contrary to

1 the provisions of the Constitution of the Northern Mariana 2 Islands, hereinafter referred to as the "Constitution."

3 Section 1 of Article XII of the Constitution provides that 4 "[t]he acquisition of permanent and long-term interests in real 5 property within the Commonwealth shall be restricted to persons 6 of Northern Marianas descent."

7 Section 2 of Article XII of the Constitution provides, in 8 part, that "[t]he term acquisition used in Section I includes 9 acquisition by sale, lease, gift, inheritance or other means."

10 The original Section 3 of Article XII of the Constitution 11 executed on December 5, 1976, provides, in part, that "[t]he terms 12 permanent and long-term interests in real property used in 13 Section 1 includes freehold interests and leasehold interests or 14 more than forty years including renewal rights..." At the 1985 15 constitutional convention, this section was amended to leaseholds 16 of more than fifty-five years. The present Section 3 goes on to 17 say that "[a]ny land transaction in violation of this provision 18 shall be void."

19 Sections 4 and 5 of Article XII of the Constitution define 20 who is a person of Northern Marianas descent and when a 21 corporation is considered a person of Northern Marianas descent, 22 respectively.

23 Section 6 of Article XII of the Constitution provides, in 24 part, that "[a]ny transaction made in violation of Section I shall 25 be void ab initio."

The constitutional question was raised by the defendant (appellant) in the Third Affirmative Defense to his Answer that "[a]ny agreement between Attorney Fennell and Antonia C.
Villagomez or between Attorney Fennell and Marian Aldan-Pierce, for the purpose of circumventing the restrictions on land alienation contained in Article XII of the Constitution of 1 the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands is illegal, 2 void, and against public policy," This position was continually 3 advanced by the defendant in his pleadings, including his 4 response to the plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Despite 5 this position, the trial court treated this case as an ordinary 6 one, however, the following authorities require the trial court 7 to do otherwise.

8                   CASES INDICATING CONSTITUTIONAL, 9                   PUBLIC, OR COMPLEX ISSUES SHOULD BE TRIED

10           In Pacific American Fisheries v. Mullaney, 191 F.2d 137
11 (9th Cir. 1951), where the constitutionality of the Alaska statute 12 imposing a higher license fee for non-resident commercial 13 fishermen than for resident fishermen was the issue, the court 14 held.

15           Because of the importance of the issues presented 16 in this suit, we think that it was not one to be 17 disposed of by Summary judgment, even if proper 18 motion for such judgment had been made or proper 19 opportunity accorded for appropriate showing by 20 affidavit or otherwise.... (citing Kennedy v. Silas 21 Mason Co., 334 U.S. 249)

22           In Kennedy v. Silas Mason Co., 334 U.S. 249, 68 S.Ct. 1031, 23 921 L.Ed. 1347 (1948), involving the overtime provisions of the 24 Fair Labor Standards Act, the court stated.

25           We do not hold that in the form the controversy took in the District Court that tribunal lacked power or justification for applying the summary judgment procedure. But summary procedures, however

1 salutary where issues are clear-cut and simple,
2 present a treacherous records for deciding issues
3 of far-flung import, on which this Court should draw 4 inferences with caution from complicated courses of 5 legislation, contracting and practice.

6 We consider it the part of good judicial adminis-7 tration to withhold decision of the ultimate 8 questions involved in this case until this or 9 another record shall present in a more solid basis 10 of findings based on litigation or on a comprehen-11 sive statement of agreed facts. While we might be 12 able, on the present record, to reach a conclusion 13 that would decide the case, it might well be found 14 later to be lacking in the thoroughness that should 15 precede judgment of this importance and which it is 16 the purpose of judicial process to provide.
17 (underscoring added)

18 In Hawaii Housing Authority v. Castle, (653 P.2d 781
19 (1982), the Supreme Court of Hawaii decided that the constitu-20 tionality of the eminent domain statute would not be decided 21 without a trial, in the following language.

22 The Supreme Court of the United States said over 30 23 years ago [b]ut summary procedures, however salu-24 tary where issues are clear-cut and simple, present 25 a treacherous record of deciding issues of far-flung import...

Our decisions have constantly been in accordance with that statement [citing a number of Hawaii cases] Since, as we have said, the case is, with respect to the "public use" issue, one of first impression, we are unwilling to decide the constitutionality of the statute without a trial, pursuant to the statute, being held.

1           In Eccles v. People's Bank of Lakewood Village, Cal, 333
2 U.S. 426, 68 S.CT. 641, 92 L.Ed. 784 (1948), the court, in ruling 3 upon a membership in the Federal Reserve System, decided:

4           Its [the bank's] claims of injury were supported 5 entirely by affidavits. Judgment on issues of 6 public moment based on such evidence, not subject 7 to probing by judge and opposing counsel, is apt 8 to be treacherous. Caution is appropriate against 9 the subtle tendency to decide public issues free 10 from the safeguards of critical scrutiny of the 11 facts through use of a declaratory summary 12 judgment. Modern equity practice has tended away 13 from a procedure based on affidavits and interroga-14 tories, because of its proven insufficiencies.

15           Complex cases where the questions are not, and often 16 cannot be, conveniently isolated as pure questions of law, are 17 not appropriately disposed of by summary judgment, as in this 18 case. Elliott v. Elliott, 49 F.R.D. 283 (S.D. N.Y. 1970).

19           Professor Moore states in his treatise, 6 Moore's Federal 20 Practice, q 56.15 (L-0) at 56-398 (2d ed 1984), that:

21           The motion for summary judgment may be made by any 22 partly in any type of action. But by its nature 23 summary judgment is apt to be ill-adapted to cases 24 of a complex nature or to those that involve 25 constitutional or other large public issues, which often need the full exploration of trial. (underscoring added)

RIGHT TO TRIAL WHERE GENUINE ISSUES EXIST

          Reading the pleadings carefully, it is clear that, apart from the complex legal issues involved, the factual issues are equally complex, and these factual issues have not been fully brought out in the course of the 1 proceedings. The trial court, in an endeavor to resolve this case, 2 simply looked at the bare legal issues, without determining if 3 there were any genuine issues still to be resolved. To this 4 extent, I feel that the trial court was in error.

5 The plaintiff alleged in the complaint and other pleadings 6 a simple set of facts, reduced to the legal issues of trust and 7 agency relationships. But defendant viewed the situation 8 differently. He sees this case as being one of:

9 (a) an attempt by two attorneys of non-Northern Marianas 10 descent to acquire freehold interest in the lands of the 11 commonwealth for resale to non-Marianas citizens contrary to the 12 Constitution, hereinafter referred to as the "scheme," and 13 (b) by the vehicle of option agreements and by using 14 persons of Northern Marianas descent as intermediaries or "straw 15 persons," to carry out the scheme.

16 Thus, there were patent disagreements as to the facts and 17 their significance. Looking at the defendant's position in the 18 best possible light, the factual issues that may be present or 19 implied are the following:

20 a. What was the intent and motive of those who devised the 21 scheme?

22 b. Why was the scheme devised when long-term leases were 23 permitted by the Constitution?

24 c. How prevalent is the use of the scheme in the 25 Commonwealth?

d. How much control did the two attorneys exercise over the "straw persons" of Northern Marianas descent in the carrying out of the scheme?

1 e. Was it the intent of the parties to the scheme that the 2 intermediaries have full control or rights over the acquisition 3 and disposition of the acquired lands, or were the intermediaries 4 simply to be inert unobjecting persons who could be easily 5 manipulated for some valuable consideration?

6 f. Did the owners of the lands in question (Northern 7 Marianas citizens) fully understand the nature of the transac-8 tion that they were entering into, or were they taken advantage 9 of by virtue of their lack of knowledge or sophistication as to 10 what the entire scheme was about?

11 In Colby v. Klune, 178 F.2d 872 (2d Cir. 1949), a 12 stockholder's suit, the court declared

13
14 We have in this case one more regrettable instance 15 of an effort to save time by an improper reversion 16 to "trial by affidavit," improper because there - 17 is involved an issue of fact, turning on credibil-18 ity Trial on oral testimony, with the opportunity 19 to has often been acclaimed as one of the 20 persistent, distinctive, and most valuable fea-21 tures of the common-law system. For only in such 22 a trial can the trier of the facts (trial judge or 23 jury) observe the witnesses' demeanor, and that 24 demeanor - absent, of course, when trial is by 25 affidavit or deposition - is recognized as an important clue to witness credibility. When, then as here, the ascertainment (as near as may be) of the facts of a case turns on credibility, a triable issue of fact exists, and the granting of a summary judgment is error. (underscoring added)

25 In Toebelman v. Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line Co., 130 F.2d 1016 (3d Cir. 1942), the court stated.

1 Upon a motion for a summary judgment, it is no part 2 of the court's function to decide issue of fact, but 3 solely to determine whether there is an issue of fact 4 to be tried... All doubts as to the existence of 5 A genuine issue as to a material fact must be 6 resolved against the party moving for a summary 7 judgment. (underscoring added)

8 In an action challenging gasoline price increases under 9 the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, the court, in McWhirter 10 Distributing Co., Inc. v. Texaco, Inc., 668 F.2d 511 (1981), held:

11 If the nonmoving party has raised by pleadings a 12 genuine issue of material fact and the evidentiary 13 matter in support of the motion for summary judgment 14 does not establish the absence of such issue, 15 summary judgment must be denied even though no 16 opposing evidentiary matter is presented... (citing 17 cases)

18 The very nature of a controversy may render summary 19 judgment inadvisable. "[S]ummary procedures should 20 be used sparingly... where motive and intent play 21 leading roles..." (citing Poller v. Columbia 22 Broadcasting, 388 U.S. 464, 82 S.Ct. 486, 7 L.Ed.2d 23 458 (1962))

24 In Peckham v. Ronrico Corporation, 171 F.2d 653 (1st Cir.
25 1948), the court, in ruling upon a suit based on alleged fraud of insolvent debtor in furnishing capital for corporation of which defendants were stockholders, declared:

It is well settled that "Rule 56 authorizes summary judgment only where the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law, where it is quite clear what the truth is, that no genuine issue remains for trial" (case citation omitted). A litigant has a right to trial here there is the slightest doubt as to the facts (case citations omitted) (underscoring added)

1 WHERE DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL EXISTS

2
3 The defendant in this case filed a request for jury trial 4 on the same day that he filed the answer.

5 While it is true that the rule on summary judgment does 6 not infringe upon the right to jury trial, in Whitaker v. Coleman, 7 115 F.2d 305 (1940), involving a suit against the owner and driver 8 of an automobile for death damages, the Fifth Circuit Court of 9 Appeals explained.

10 11 The invoked [Summary] procedure, valuable as it is 12 for striking through sham claims and defences which 13 stand in the way of a direct approach to the truth 14 of the case, was not intended to, it cannot deprive a litigant of, or at all encroach upon, his right to a jury trial...

15 To proceed to summary judgment it is not sufficient 16 then that the judge may not credit testimony 17 professed on a tendered issue. It must appear that 18 there is no substantial evidence on it, that is, 19 either that the tendered evidence is in its nature too incredible to be accepted by reasonable minds, or that conceding its truth, it is without legal probative force...

20 Summary judgment procedure is not a catch penny 21 contrivance to take unwary litigants into its toils 22 and deprive them of a trial, it is a liberal measure, 23 liberally designed for arriving at the truth its purpose is not to cut litigants off from their right of trial by jury if they really have evidence which they will offer on a trial, it is to carefully test 24 this out, in advance of trial by inquiry and 25 determining whether such evidence exists. (underscoring added)

1 ENTITLEMENT TO JUDGMENT AS A MATTER OF LAW

2 The trial court found that there were no genuine issues 3 of fact either as to the allegations in plaintiff's complaint or 4 any of defendant's affirmative defenses and counterclaims.

5 In Shahid v. Gulf Power Co., 291 F.2d 422 (5th Cir. 1961), 6 an action against electric power supplier for fire damage to 7 hotel, Judge Rives stated.

8 Before rendering summary judgment the district 9 court must determine both (1) that there is not a 10 genuine issue as to any material fact and (2) that 11 the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a 12 matter of law... Requisite (2) does not automatically follow from requisite (1).

13 Judge Rives quoted with approval the ruling in Palmer v.
14 Chamberlin, 191 F.2d 532, 27 A.L.R.2d 416 (5th Cir. 19510,

15 16 ...before rendering judgment the court must be 17 satisfied not only that there is no issue as to any 18 material fact, but also that the moving party is 19 entitled to a judgment as a matter of law where, as 20 in this case, the decision of a question of law by 21 the Court depends upon inquiry into the surrounding 22 facts and circumstances, the Court should refuse to 23 grant a motion for a summary judgment until the facts 24 and circumstances have been sufficiently developed 25 to enable the Court to be reasonably certain that it is making a correct determination of the question of law. (underscoring added)

1 THE "RELUCTANT APPROACH"

2 For a case of this importance, there appears to have been 3 a marked desire by the court to expedite the resolution of the 4 cause. A number of technical objections were raised by the 5 plaintiff's counsel to frustrate the attempt by the defendant to 6 obtain sufficient time to prepare his case. Obeisance to the 7 technicalities of the rules of the court was quite evident in the 8 court's rulings.

9 In S.J. Groves & Sons Company v. Ohio Turnpike Commission, 10 315 F.2d 235 (6th Cir. 1962), cert. denied, 375 U.S. 284 (1963), 11 where a contractor brought suit against the Turnpike Commission 12 for the Construction of a turnpike, Judge Miller commented:

13 This Court has on several occasions expressed the 14 view that a trial judge should be slow in disposing 15 of a case of any complexity on a motion for summary 16 judgment, that while such a judgment widely used is 17 a praiseworthy and timesaving device, yet such 18 prompt dispatch of judicial business is neither the 19 sole nor the primary purpose for which courts have 20 been established, and that a party should not be deprived of an adequate opportunity to fully develop the case by witnesses and a trial, when the issues involved make such procedure the appropriate one.
(underscoring added)

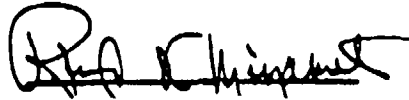

21 It is often the case that although the basic facts 22 are not in dispute, the parties in good faith may 23 nevertheless disagree about the inferences to be 24 drawn from these facts, what the intention of the 25 parties was as shown by the facts, or whether an estoppel or a waiver of certain rights admitted to exist should be drawn from such facts. Under such circumstances, the case is not one to be decided by the Trial Judge on a motion for summary judgment.

CONCLUSION

From the foregoing, it is my opinion that the summary judgment for the plaintiff be vacated and that the case be remanded to the Trial Court for a jury trial.
